Theme of the Special Session

A huge amount of data is generated continuously, look for an utility or using them constitute a key asset for the organizations. Independently of where the data is stored, the data represent facts coming from heterogeneous devices, the businesses, among others, and for this reason their analysis and studying is a constant concern in the organizations. From the data, it is possible anticipate or improve the understanding of the business process behaviors, the customer behaviors, the supplier behaviors, the competitors behaviors, among many others applications.

The world context demands to the organizations the capacity of adaptation along diverse regions, with different cultures and profiles. So, the understanding of different behavior patterns associated with the actors interacting with each organization along the incidence areas represents a key aspect.

The aim of this special session is oriented to draw a picture of the recent advances and challenges in data mining and big data, soliciting contributions related to real-world applications.

Topics of Interest: We invite original (un-published) research contributions based on the above mentioned theme including following topics but not limited to:
