1. Leaders do not like victims. Good or bad, they own responsibilities. They learn from their wrong decisions and ensure they always do something right.

2. Relation building exercise is very high in the agenda of a leader. Establishing one-to-one rapport with colleagues, within the organization and with clients, is an important priority in a leader.

3. Leadership is all about developing future leaders. Only performing leaders can do this. They lead from the front.

4. Every leader thinks like a leader, feels like a leader and indeed, develops leadership culture.

5. Good leaders determine their own destinies. Their base is a strong foundation of value based character. Their attitude is positive. They are achievers. They are not professional mourners.

Complied by – Mr. Aiyer, Amity University Press