Event Summary

The `I AM SHE` play was organised by the Amity Institution of Social Sciences as a part of its International Women`s Month Celebrations.

The event was held on 7th March 2022 by the student coordinator Ishrita Duarah under the guidance of the faculty coordinator, Dr Sanajana Sharma Marwaha.

The team was composed of 16 members, who actively participated to make the play a huge success and spread the word.

The play was very eventful and enlightening. It projected how entrenched Patriarchy is and how influenced we are. We tend to push each gender in a certain direction to the point where we forget they are all human and have their own emotions and life.

It was really very delightful to see a huge audience cheering for their friends and the character themselves.

Event Objectives

By showing how women are oppressed and judged harder based on their gender, the play was intended to increase public awareness. The play critiques famous personalities for their feminist stance and mocks them for their personalities.

The main objective of the play was to show that a woman can be as strong or maybe stronger than a man. The fact that she doesn't need a knight in shining armour can be seen in this modern-day. A woman doesn't have to rely on anyone but she can be completely free when society finally opens its eye.

The play was written so that the audience could easily identify with it, making it humorous and showing them how unfair society can be when it comes to gender equality.

It wasn't intended to insult or criticize them, but rather to demonstrate to the audience how harsh society is on women and anyone who tries to make a difference.

Event Highlights

The cast included Neha Kakkar, Sunny Leone, Michelle Obama, Betty Freidan, Bharti Singh, Indira Gandhi, Harry Styles, and Justin Baldoni. As the personalities were interviewed, they were ridiculed for being feminists and judged for their careers.

While Neha, played by Manika, was criticized for her item songs, Sunny, played by Shristi, was ridiculed for her career choices. In the episode portrayed by Satya, Michelle was derided for being the breadwinner in the family. Betty, represented by Kuberdita, was scorned for her book `The feminine Mystique`.

Bharti Singh, played by Anjali, was mocked for her body after a commercial break and Indira Gandhi, who was portrayed by Nainika, was questioned for her position as a Prime Minister. Harry and Justin, played off by Ronit and Ramit, were laughed upon for taking a feminine stance.

As a whole, the play was entertaining and interactive. Throughout the talk, all of the personalities pointed fingers at society's narrow mindset. By way of powerful poetry, the narrator described the strength of these stances.
