CAMP binding proteins from pathogenic microorganisms is a work done by me under the guidance of Dr. Jayashree G, Amrita School of Biotechnology, in the final semester as a part of my graduation. As a part of Summer Research Fellowship Programme 2017, by IAS, I worked on Protein-nucleic acid interaction analysis of a novel transcriptional regulator Rv1255c of Mycobacterium tuberculosis H37Rv, in RGCB, Trivandrum, under the supervision of Dr. R. Ajay Kumar.

A write-up (in about 250 words) as to the specific area of interest of the applicant and what he/she would like to learn and achieve through this fellowship. It can also include the specific experiment or theory that the applicant wants to work on but NOT a general description of the area.

I, Devika Sunil, pursuing MSc Biotechnology in Visva Bharati, Santiniketan. My area of interest is mainly in protein and Nucleic acids. I like microbial works too. In summer 2017, I got an opportunity to work on topic Protein-nucleic acid interaction analysis of a novel transcriptional regulator Rv1255c of Mycobacterium tuberculosis H37Rv, in Mycobacterial Research Laboratory, RGCB, Trivandrum, as a part of SRFP 2017, by IAS. During that period I came to know more about the pathogen and about the infection too. The previous studies state that the ability of the organism to go in a dormant state in healthy immune condition and its ability to reactivate during immunosuppressive condition expands the territory of the organism. Rv1255c is a gene which hypothesized to have an important role in reactivation. This gene belongs to TFTR family of proteins, which express autoregulation. By performing Non-radioactive Electrophoretic Mobility Shift Assay, we found that there is an interaction between the protein and its upstream sequence. And now I wish to know more about this and work in more on this related topic. If I again get an opportunity to work in a lab again, I promise, will be there wholeheartedly and complete the work sincerely.
