3.1 General Introduction of the Event

The One day Hands-on training workshop on Introduction of Neuroscientific Tools in Psychology was organized by AIBAS in collaboration with IIC.

3.2 Inspiration & Objectives of the Event

The workshop was organized with primary aim to inspire students for innovation in the field of psychology in general and to train them in application of neurofeedback techniques in particular.

3.3 Brief about the address/talk of speakers

Mr. Siddharth Shahi presented the use of EEG and GSR as the major topics. Thro participants gained knowledge about how external stimuli affect the D-TAB, inclu gamma waves. The participants also learned that delta and theta waves are the most significant, followed by gamma and beta waves. Moreover, the workshop participants were introduced to the concept of eye tracking and its potential for unveiling unconscious feedback from individuals. The session was indeed engaging and insightful as it also managed to showcase on EEG device how brain waves change when one is involved in diverse range of activities like listening to music, solving a Rubik's cube and painting. The session started with Introductory Session in the morning in which AIBAS BSc CP First Semester student compered the session, Head of the Department Dr Priyanka Verma welcomed the resource person and all AIBAS students and faculty members and Guest Speaker made an introductory presentation on breakthroughs made in field of neuropsychology and neuromarketing using latest neurofeedback technology. The introductory session was followed by two technical training sessions for PG semester 1 and semester 2 students respectively. In the end, Dr. Fouzia .A. Shaikh delivered the vote of thanks to the resource person, all the workshop participants, Head of the department and faculty members of AIBAS.

3.4 'Take Homes' for the Guest and Attendees

The students of AIBAS learnt how to use EEG device and understood brain wave map. Many of them also have chosen to further enhance their understanding of neuropsychology by engaging in collaborative research work with the resource person. One important advice given to the students of AIBAS was to learn and master coding skills and basic computer programming language like Python for effective stimulus design in conducting engaging, and effective experiments in psychology.

3.5 Future plan for utilizing the contacts developed with the Invited Guests:

AIBAS looks forward to inviting Mr Siddharth Shahi again so that department can effectively utilize the EEG and GSR devices in practical and research opportunities offered by AIBAS. Budget of the Event (Budget Sanctioned, Total Expenditure & Revenue Generated)

Parallel Sessions

Professional Development session at A block was hosted by Mr Adity Pandey. Director ASLA, Prof. S K Jha and Major General (Retd.) J S Dhull accorded warm welcome to Mr Nihal Dubey, youth wellbeing trainer and a seasoned professional. This was followed by an interactive session that was infused with enthusiasm and excitement. Guest for the day outlined the event as the “MBA” program highlighting three key focus areas of success and personality development namely Mind, Body and Action. Mr Nihal laid down a “3 Cs” approach to mental health highlighting the importance of “Check”, “Chat” and “Chill”.

According to the invitee, “Check” implies tracking one’s mental health condition to identify illness itself. To “Chat” implies effective communication of the problem areas tracked in the previous step.

While students identified persons like family, and friends as the major partners for chatting, the speaker also highlighted the role of the self and the importance of self-communication. Next important step in mental health after “check” is to “chat”, or to communicate the troubles. To “chill” implies cultivating a positive attitude and being confident irrespective of whatever comes in the path of success.

With respect to the “Body” aspect, the speaker highlighted the argument that a healthy body is the home to a sound mind. He, in a way promoted the idea of individual hygiene and the importance of grooming. Grooming, according to him boosts confidence, promotes health and hygiene, ensures lasting impression and professionalism. A well-maintained personality shows dedication, and respect to one’s own self.

With respect to “Action” the speaker highlighted the final and the most crucial step towards success, namely, execution. Arranging the role of dreams, goals, steps, deadlines and tiny actions in a hierarchy, the speaker mentioned the utmost power in the tiniest action that is taken. Moving upwards from tiny actions, one can achieve his/her dreams.

To end the session, the speaker highlighted the inspiring story of Prashant Gade. In 2018, Gade left his high paying job to work out a technology to facilitate inventing artificial arms for poor handicapped individuals. Despite having a highly paid job, Gade apparently was missing direction in his life and wanted to contribute positively towards the society.

become a role model and a motivator. She urged students to take responsibility of their own actions; good or bad to learn from their own mistakes to move ahead on their chosen paths. To support her words, she put forth examples from film and sports industry. Students enjoyed the interactive session by identifying Priyanka Chopra, Mary Kom and Taylor Swift from their childhood photographs. They inspired the speaker to speak enthusiastically by replying to several questions.

Ms Saniya elaborated upon personal development through healthy living style. She explained importance of hygiene from girl's point of view. Students were introduced to several products brought out by whisper company. Ms Azim stressed upon 'feeling good' during menstruation cycle by arming oneself with all kinds of supportive knowledge. She went on to say that empowerment should be used wisely to make others empowered in turn.

The speaker further emphasized upon 'Dress to Express'. She said that dressing up was an important activity in personality development of any person. One feels good and does good after being well dressed. Ms Saniya Azim came down to students' level to get across her points. In the end all were invited to register with 'SHERO'. Whisper goodies were distributed to those who registered for project 'SHERO'.

The session ended with vote of thanks by Dr Ruby and was followed by group photograph session and lunch for dignitaries.

The founding fathers of our Vedic Sanatan spiritual civilization have mandated Yoga and Meditation as an integral part of our daily life and Sattvic food and prayers for peace and wellbeing of the entire humanity. They further, inspired us to integrate yoga in our work life and achieve perfection in our work activity through “Yoga Karmeshu Koshlam” as proclaimed in Bhagwat Gita by Lord Krishna. Yoga was in fact the complete therapy for a healthy Mind, healthy Body and a Happy Soul and an assurance of long, healthy and blissful life, said Prof Sharma.

Today, when the world community is seriously engaged in finding lasting solutions to world peace, social harmony and sustainable development, Yoga and Ayurveda together offer a highly effective and universally acceptable solutions for creating and sustaining a peaceful and happy world that shall achieve the noble goal of good health for all, said Prof Sharma.

The Haryana Yog Ayog has successfully taken Yoga classes to all the schools of Haryana and has also established Yoga Schools in great numbers in the state of Haryana. The Yog Ayog is also seriously engaged in empowering the youth of Haryana with universal human values of
