De Facto- Essay writing competition marked the beginning of Amity Institute of Social Sciences' celebration of International Women's Month.

The event was held in the offline mode due to Covid- 19 protocols.

Despite this, the event witnessed immense participation of students of AISS as they wrote with fervor and passion.

The competition was aimed towards honing the writing skills of the students along with providing a platform for them to express their views on the theme of BreakTheBias.

They say that words have the power to change the way we see the world and so, AISS organised this competition to gather the views and ideas held by the students when we talk about the issue of women and their role in our society.

The event saw immense participation from the students of different departments of AISS.

Receiving 33 submissions from the students was one of the most significant highlights of the event.

The essays were written with fervor and passion reflecting the strong emotions and ideas that the students have towards women and their issues in the society

The themes of the essay competition were as follows:

Is there freedom to express one's sexuality in contemporary society?

Pseudo Feminism: A Bane on Feminist Movement

Gender Equality by 2050 is Mission Impossible
